WORKERS REJOICE!

G.F'er, your long voiced wail has been answered. There is now an employment coordination center for general forestry. Other curricula in the college have quite efficiently taken care of their job placement within the department, but G.F. has long posed a problem because it embraces so many departments and students. Therefore, as a direct result of the last Student Leaders Conference, our Dean of Students has taken action and his office is now the coordinating center for all G.F. employment, both temporary and permanent.

Briefly, the system works like this. Many people in the college receive notice of job openings, particularly Dr. Barrett, handling temporary employment, Dr. Graves, directing senior placement, and Professor Plumley, handling employment of graduates. Details on all employment are sent to the Dean of Men's office which, in turn, files the information. Both the file and the board are easily accessible to students and are maintained by Mrs. Spear, who is the one to see for any details. The purpose of the center in the Dean of Student's office is primarily to inform students of employment openings. It does not interview or make actual placements, but it can keep one informed as to where such activities take place.

This new system represents an outstanding improvement in student services. Not only should senior stumpies, plagued with the thought soon having to earn a living, be interested in it, but underclassmen also should watch the board for summer jobs, or just to get an idea of general work possibilities in their field. Non-stumpies might stop by the board once in a while too, because some of the jobs listed are in other fields or of a general nature.

Ye Knothole will help out by initiating a regular employment column starting next week, but for details check that bulletin board. It makes for enjoyable browsing if nothing else.

INTRODUCING——YOUR NEW KNOTHOLE

——Which for all practical purposes, will be about like the old one! That means it is completely a student paper, as trite as it may seem, by and for us. It has two editors but it could use the efforts of a staff of at least 600, speaking up whenever they have something worth saying. Our first job is to inform, but we also can instigate action if we yell loud enough. So you 600 reporters get busy and speak out, so that the Knothole expresses true student opinion and voice, and not just the half-baked word of its editors. The Knothole box is in the Marshall lounge.
YOUR STUDENT LEADERS' CONFERENCE

This initiates a series of articles that will try to show the values of the annual conference at Pack Forest.

The major fault in the three day meeting is that more students and faculty cannot attend. Facilities at Pack Forest and a limited budget prohibits a larger attendance. The communication between faculty and students is excellent, and everyone is urged to express himself fully at the conference.

"This is fine," you say "but what has evolved from the first two conferences?" There were many discussions about intangible relationships, which have improved considerably since they were talked over. A few of the tangible accomplishments are as follows:

- An improved freshman orientation program.
- More diversified convocation programs.
- A rewritten Forestry Association constitution, incorporating many ideas brought out at the last conference.
- An automatic coffee machine.
- Increase of student activities fee to $7.50 per semester, giving the Forestry Association a bigger budget for greater support of clubs and other student activities.

Future articles will give a more detailed description of certain aspects of the conference. Keep an eye open for them.

The Editors feel that this year's Banquet, with its overflowing attendance, was excellent, and take this opportunity to extend a word of appreciation and thanks, as members of the Forestry Association, to Bart Green and his committee, and especially to Toastmaster "H-N" Ayers, for the exceptionally fine job they did. To those who left immediately after filling their gullets, may we mention that the ENTIRE evening was very enjoyable.
